EARS Winter Field Day—January 30/31

Many thanks to Jon , Jon , Herman, Doug, Jim (s), and the other 20 or so members who came out to support the Winter Field Day activity”

The event was hosted on W1JP's property at the corner of Artist Ave and Elm Street in Englewood. A perfect location to set up shelters, antennae, and power generators! Rigs were set up for HF , VHF, and UHF use. The event “officially” started out at 9:00am Saturday morning, although the Jon's spent many hours working to prepare the grounds for the Club’s use. Thanks to you guys! Jim brought coffee and doughnuts/bagels to get everyone started. Tables, tents, and canopies were set up to provide operating positions and spots to sit down and socialize.

Herman brought over two generators which worked perfectly, and mostly quietly over the day, and there were battery back ups available to use after dark.

success! The band was fairly active. I was really impressed at how easy it was to get the Hex beam set up and running.

The SWR was down in the 1:1.2 range even though the antenna was near some tall trees and only about 12 feet off the ground. The picture to the right is Jon working 20 meters using the Hex beam. The end-fed long wire antenna was set up to work 40 meters Jon B set up the 135 ft (or so) long wire between two sturdy Eucalyptus Robustus trees on the property and promptly began making contacts into the late evening hours!

UHF/VHF was covered, although I don't think any Field Day contacts were officially logged during the day.

Although we were a half mile or so "off the beaten path, we did get some interest from the community, with the potential of a few learning to become new amateur radio operators!

There were hot dogs, chips, cold drinks, coffee and other snacks available, some really nice places to sit and visit, so I thought the event was a great success.

Again, I would like to thank Jon for letting the club use his property, and both Jon's for the work they put into clearing spots to make the Winter Field

Day a fun event.
